Buenos Aires, September 12, 2023 — Landmark Developments, a company with a vast experience and more than 500 thousand square meters built, which has the support and experience of Grupo Wertheim, presented at Casa FOA its most recent and ambitious project: Udaondo.

The construction of the three towers was conceived and designed by studio Aisenson, merging traditional architectural design with innovative and modern concepts. It includes hotel-quality amenities and services and an exclusive collection of works of art that add beauty and improve the quality of life by combining aesthetics, comfort and functionality.

The project is managed and directed by Ianuzzi Colombo and covers a total area of 165,826 square meters in the northern corridor of the City of Buenos Aires, with large areas of green space and trees.

It is a mixed-use real estate development, which materializes in its spaces a unique proposal for an extraordinary life. With a privileged location between the river and the city, it is strategically located at the intersection of Udaondo and Libertador Avenues, in the northern corridor of the City of Buenos Aires.

Udaondo is a project that combines architecture, art and design as a whole. With the premise of creating environments characterized by beauty and art, because this generates a better quality of life, the project entrusted Colección Pampa with the selection of the two specific sites for the arrangement of works by Daniel Joglar and Marta Minujín, Argentine artists of international recognition.

Joglar's sculptural group "Las Olas"(The Waves) will be located at the intersection of Libertador and Udaondo Avenues, and Minujín's twelve sculptures "Los Meses del Año" (The Months of the Year) will be placed in the central plaza that links the three towers.

The Río Norte and Río Sur Towers offer spacious residences and penthouses, each with private rooms and swimming pools. The Torre Ciudad is home to the 5-star lifestyle hotel and its Branded Residences, with state-of-the-art infrastructure and design.

Urquiola's singular imprint in the interior design is reflected in the kitchens, bathrooms, furniture and lighting, creating an essential distinctive that enhances the cosmopolitan proposal of a unique lifestyle.

The project is also based on values of sustainability and environmental responsibility, which translate into conscious construction decisions to protect the environment and society.

"Udaondo is everything we dream of in a modern and intelligent project; it is based on making a habit out of the extraordinary, fusing an appreciation for traditional architectural design, art and the pursuit of innovation," said Alejandro Furst, director of developments for Landmark Developments, and assured: "Our residents will enjoy a wide range of exceptional amenities, designed to provide them with a life full of comfort.
